RULE SUMMARY

This rule removes a specific code exemption for a particular class of glazing known as "polished wired glass" from compliance standards for safety glass in fire rated assemblies (glass typically found in corridor doors and side windows) installed in all buildings. Oregon's current structural code exempts wired glass from having to comply with these impact ratings for all but educational occupancies (kindergarten through twelfth grade). The proposed rule will amend the structural code to prohibit the installation of wired glass in areas where there is a high potential for human impact (known as hazardous locations, as defined in the state building code) unless the glass meets the same impact ratings as comparable safety glazing products.
